I'll not be back (strange end to test careers)

Norman Mitchell-Innes made his test debut for England against South Africa at Trent Bridge in 1935. But he pulled out of the next one, worried about his hay fever : 'I might be sneezing just as a catch came my way.' He never did play again : the selectors probably didn't appreciate the fact that he felt well enough to make a century for Oxford University at the Oval, while England were sliding to defeat at Lord's.

You're Never Too Old

The Oldest Test Captain

England have the top three in this list : Walter Hammond was 43 when he skipped them for the last time, in New Zealand in 1947, and Gubby Allen was 45 when he captained in the west Indies the following season.

But W G Grace was 50 when he played (and captained) in a test for the last time, against Australia at Trent Bridge in 1899.

The oldest man to captain on his test debut was 42 year old Nelson Betancourt of the West Indies, in what turned out to be his only test, against England in Port-of-Spain in 1929-30.

On this day (August 6th)

On this day in 2011, Norman Gordon became the first test cricketer to usher in his 100th birthday.

Gordon, a South African fast bowler, played in the famous timeless test in Durban in 1938-39, which lasted for ten days before play was called off so that the England team could catch the ship home. Gordon played all five tests in that series, his only one, and took 20 wickets.

New Zealand's Eric Tindall was the only other test cricketer to live past 99.
